Recommendations

Super foods recommended

| Superfood | Recommendation (if) |
|---|---|
| Lemon | Lemon contains citrus and antioxidants which improve recovery after intense aerobic exercise training by minimising oxidative stress and inflammation associated with exercise, as well as by reducing the levels of muscle circulating markers. |
| Raisins | Raisins are a natural source of glucose and fructose that gives a burst of energy and reduces stress. |
| Banana | Loaded with potassium, magnesium, vitamin B6 and vitamin C. Nutrient levels rise as bananas ripen; dark-spotted bananas are 8 times more effective in boosting the power of white blood cells than green-skin bananas. |
| Brazil nuts | High in magnesium — brazil nuts contain 56 mg of magnesium in 100 g, which fulfils 13% of the required amount. |
| Carrot | Carrots are good sources of vitamin A that help reduce oxidative stress generated during exercise. |
| Watermelon seeds | Rich in PUFA and MUFA and also contain vitamins A, D, E and K; they help with the lipid profile. |
| Saffron | Saffron contains an impressive variety of plant compounds that act as antioxidants — molecules that protect cells against free radicals and oxidative stress. Notable saffron antioxidants include crocin, crocetin, safranal and kaempferol. Saffron extract has also been shown to support wound healing. |
| Prunes | Eating prunes as part of a weight-control diet can improve weight loss. Consumption of dried fruit is recommended during weight loss and enhances feelings of fullness. It also acts as a natural laxative. |
| Sweet potato | Sweet potatoes are rich in complex carbohydrates that help replenish the glycogen stores lost during a workout, thus promoting recovery. |
| Kalonji seeds | Kalonji (black cumin) seeds provide antioxidant and anti-inflammatory compounds that may support muscle recovery and reduce exercise-induced oxidative stress. They also provide healthy fats and micronutrients, supporting overall cardiovascular health and recovery in tennis players. |

On-court hydration

500 ml water with a pinch of salt every 20 minutes during match play; add 30 g of a carbohydrate drink if the match goes past 90 minutes.

General guidelines

1. Hydration

We suggest aiming for a daily water intake of approximately 30–35 ml per kilogram of body weight. For example, a 70 kg individual may require around 2.1–2.5 litres of water per day.

Fluid requirements may increase depending on activity levels, environment and overall health status. We recommend increasing intake on workout days, during travel, in hot or humid weather, while spending long hours in air-conditioned environments, or during episodes of loose stools or vomiting.

As a practical approach, begin the day with 1–2 glasses of water and continue sipping fluids consistently throughout the day.

A simple way to monitor hydration is by checking that urine remains light yellow in colour.

2. Mindful eating

We recommend eating meals slowly and mindfully, allowing at least 15–20 minutes per meal.

Eating in a seated and calm environment, chewing food thoroughly, and avoiding screens while eating can significantly improve digestion and satiety.

We suggest using slightly smaller plates to support better portion awareness.

Where possible, stop eating when you feel comfortably full rather than overly stuffed.

3. Eating out / ordering smart

When eating out, we suggest structuring the meal so that approximately half the plate contains vegetables, one quarter protein and one quarter carbohydrates.

Choosing grilled, steamed, roasted or tandoori options is generally preferable over fried dishes.

Simple combinations such as dal, sabzi, roti/rice with paneer, eggs, chicken or fish work well.

We recommend keeping rich gravies, cheese-heavy dishes and butter-loaded meals for occasional consumption.

4. Dessert & craving management

We suggest limiting desserts to one serving per occasion or sharing when possible.

Desserts are best enjoyed after a main meal, which helps reduce sharp blood sugar fluctuations.

For regular cravings, planned portions such as dark chocolate, fruit-based desserts or a small sweet portion can be incorporated mindfully.

5. Travel & airport eating

While travelling, we recommend choosing practical and easily digestible options such as idli, dosa, curd rice, paneer wraps, fruits, yogurt, nuts or makhana.

Carrying backup snacks from home is strongly encouraged.

Hydration requirements are often higher during travel, and we suggest consciously increasing water intake.

6. Oils & fat usage

We recommend using good-quality oils such as groundnut, coconut, rice bran or olive oil, or moderate quantities of ghee.

Cold-pressed or filtered oils may be preferred where available.

As a general guideline, visible fats may be restricted to approximately 3–4 teaspoons per day, unless modified for a specific clinical goal.

7. Salt guidelines

We suggest keeping total daily salt intake to less than 5 grams per day (approximately 1 teaspoon).

For clients with blood pressure concerns or other medical conditions, intake should be modified as per clinical requirements.

8. Cookware & kitchen tools

We recommend the use of safe cookware such as stainless steel, cast iron, ceramic or glass-based utensils.

Damaged non-stick cookware should be avoided.

Appliances such as air fryers and ovens can be excellent tools to reduce oil usage.

9. Food storage
Cooked meals are best stored in steel or glass containers.

We suggest avoiding hot food being transferred directly into plastic containers.

Prepared foods are ideally consumed within 24–48 hours.

10. Office meal management
We strongly recommend planning meals and snacks ahead for workdays.

Keeping snacks such as nuts, fruit, yogurt or protein options readily available helps prevent long fasting gaps.

Even during busy schedules, we suggest not skipping meals entirely.

11. Supplements routine
All supplements should be taken strictly as prescribed.

We suggest attaching supplement intake to a daily routine such as breakfast, post-workout or bedtime to improve consistency.

12. Sweeteners
We recommend limiting all forms of sweeteners, including jaggery, honey and brown sugar.

Where needed, low-calorie options such as stevia may be considered.

13. Honey usage
If honey is included, we suggest limiting intake to approximately 1 teaspoon per day, unless otherwise specified.

Avoid repeated heating or adding it to very hot liquids.

14. Rice guidelines
All rice varieties may be included based on tolerance, digestion and preference.

White rice is generally easier to digest, while brown and red rice provide greater fibre.

We recommend combining rice with protein and vegetables.

15. Wheat & grains
We suggest prioritising whole grains such as whole wheat, jowar, bajra, ragi, oats and quinoa.

Refined flour-based foods may be limited.

16. Fruits & vegetables hygiene
All fruits and vegetables should be thoroughly washed under running water before use.

Leafy vegetables should be dried before refrigeration.

17. Label reading
We recommend checking protein, sugar, sodium and serving size before purchasing packaged foods.

Products where sugar appears within the first few ingredients should be limited.

18. Portion control
Portion consistency plays an important role in outcomes.

Using a kitchen scale or standard measuring tools can be helpful, especially in the initial stages.

19. Gut & symptom management
For constipation, we suggest increasing fluids, fibre and post-meal walking.

For loose stools, focus on hydration, electrolytes and simple meals.

For indigestion, temporarily reducing oily and heavy foods is advisable.

20. Health monitoring
Routine health parameters such as blood sugar, lipid profile, CBC, vitamin D, vitamin B12 and blood pressure may be reviewed every 3–6 months.

21. Meal structuring framework
We recommend that every major meal includes:

- one protein source
- one fibre source
- one carbohydrate source
- controlled fat

This helps improve satiety and meal balance.

22. Protein optimisation
Protein should ideally be included in every meal and snack.

We recommend spreading intake across the day rather than concentrating it in one meal.

23. Hunger vs craving awareness
We encourage checking whether the urge to eat is driven by physical hunger or emotional triggers such as stress, boredom or fatigue.

24. Meal timing flexibility
We suggest maintaining consistent meal intervals of 3–5 hours, with flexibility based on lifestyle and work routines.

25. Snacking strategy
Snacks are optional and should be used strategically.

A well-structured snack should ideally include protein and fibre.

26. Weekend & social life strategy
We recommend maintaining regular meals during the day rather than under-eating in anticipation of outings.

At social events, focus on portion awareness and return to routine at the next meal.

27. Alcohol guidelines
If applicable, alcohol intake should remain occasional.

We suggest eating before drinking and ensuring adequate hydration alongside.

28. Sleep & recovery
We strongly recommend 7–8 hours of quality sleep daily.

Sleep is an important determinant of hunger regulation, hormonal balance and recovery.

29. Physical activity integration
Daily movement remains a key recommendation.

A baseline of 7–10k steps per day may be suggested where feasible.

Structured exercise may be added as per individual goals.

30. NEAT (daily movement)
Non-exercise movement such as walking, taking stairs and standing breaks should be encouraged throughout the day.

31. Stress & emotional eating
We recommend identifying common triggers for emotional eating and building alternative coping mechanisms.

32. Menstrual cycle considerations
For female clients, appetite changes, cravings and temporary weight fluctuations around the menstrual cycle are normal.

Meal plans may be adjusted accordingly.

33. Eating speed & satiety signals
We suggest pausing midway through meals to reassess hunger and fullness.

Stopping at around 80% fullness is a helpful practical guideline.

34. Consistency framework
We strongly emphasise consistency over perfection.

Even 4–5 well-managed days per week can lead to meaningful progress.

35. Environment design
We recommend keeping healthy foods visible and easily accessible.

Trigger foods may be limited or stored out of immediate reach.

36. Progress tracking beyond weight
Progress should include:

- measurements
- strength
- energy
- sleep
- digestion
- performance

Weight alone should not be the only marker.

37. Travel / busy day backup plan
We suggest always having 2–3 reliable fallback meal options available for busy days. Examples include:

- curd + fruit
- protein bar + nuts
- simple dal-rice
- paneer sandwich
